Fall Registration Takes A New Twist -- NO LINES

by Michael Heister

Cal State's new computerized mail-in-class registration system will mean no more lines at the gym for most students this Fall, according to registration supervisor Mary Smith.

The new system, which really takes effect this Fall, will begin to affect new and returning students starting in April. Returning students will receive packets in the mail during the second week in April. New students may receive their packets upon acceptance to the university.

Depending on when they register, students will be placed in one of three successive priority batches, with the first batch having first priority for class registration. Within each batch, priority is given in the following order: seniors, classified graduates, unclassified graduates, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen.

In order to qualify to register with the first batch, students must receive advising from instructors in their departments during the advising period of April 30-May 9. Unclassified students may make advising appointments through the office of Associate Dean for Academic Services Steve Prouty. Instructors sign the cards which include requested class schedules. Packets received by the Registrar's office by May 9 at 8 p.m., along with either full Fall registration fees or a non-refundable $20 deposit. They may be mailed in or dropped off in-person at SS-100, the Registrar's office.

Advising is not required, but recommended for registration batches 2 and 3. The deadline for batch 2 is June 2 at 8 p.m. and for batch 3 is Aug. 18, 8 p.m. The latter date is also the deadline for all students using mail-in registration to pay their Fall fees in full. Students who have not paid their fees by this date will have their registration kicked out and their class reservations dropped. Students who have not registered by Aug. 18 may register at an on-line walk-through registration at the Creative Arts building Sept. 22 and 23.

Students who register by Aug. 18 will receive class confirmation by mail in the second week of September. Priority add-drop will be available to these students at the Registrar's office from Sept. 16-19.

Campus administration has a variety of goals for the new system, which has been in planning and set-up for about two years. One goal is to save most students from having to wait in long lines at appointed times to register, long an irritant with students and staff alike. Another is to get more students the classes they want at the times they want. Administration is attempting to meet these

The Figure 4, a Riverside based band, will be appearing in the CSUSB Pub tonight.

The Figure 4 originated in Riverside while the members were in high school. They began as a reckless garage band playing anywhere they could; high school parties, fraternity parties, talent shows, battle of the bands. But soon this became unsatisfying as their collection of originally composed material accumulated. Recording and clubbing became inevitable and as some early demo's suggest their songwriting abilities were intuitively genuine. With their own material the band has played a wide variety of venues in the southern California area including Goody's, Radio City, Club 88, Surfari Sam's, The Blackwatch Pub, The UCR Barn quite a few times, and many others.

The band's sound is unique and very much their own. Basically a guitar band, no synthesizers here, musically and lyrically the band is textural and dynamic. Textural in the sense of the differing tonal qualities and dynamic in the sense of their use of crescendos and decrescendos. A completely intense song may be followed by a grindingly slow one or vice versa depending on the particular night. This spontaneity is a major force of their live show and a must to experience.

Senator Gary Hart Advocates Higher Academic Standards And Better Funding

State Senator Gary K. Hart (D.-18th district) will talk about educational reform in an appearance at 8 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 30 at Cal State, San Bernardino.

Following his talk in the Lecture Hall of the Physical Sciences Building, a reception will be held in the adjoining foyer. The event is free and open to the public.

An advocate of strengthening academic standards and providing better funding for public education in California, State Senator Hart currently serves as chair of the Senate Education Committee. In 1983, he co-authored SB 813, a major school finance-education reform bill.

Hart is vice-chair of the joint committee on Review of the Master Plan for Higher Education and serves on the joint committee on science and technology, in addition to several other committee assignments.

Born in San Diego, Hart is a product of the Santa Monica, Whittier and Santa Barbara public schools. After obtaining a football scholarship and B.A. degree from Stanford, he earned a master's in education from Harvard University.

First elected to the State Legislature in 1974, Hart served four terms in the State Assembly representing Santa Barbara County. In 1982 he won the 18th district State Senate seat, which represents portions of Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and Ventura counties.

accomplished writers. She currently resides in Mexico City and teaches at the National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM). Her area of expertise is comparative U.S. foreign policy in Mexico, Latin America, and the Philippines.

New Lounge Planned for Dormitories

Plans are underway for a new student multipurpose room to be built adjacent to the pool and patio area in Serrano Village, announced Doyle Stansel, associate dean of student life and housing.

"The architect is working on plans for an 1,800-square-foot room that could be used for dances, parties and meetings. It will have a small stage and kitchen area and open out onto the pool area so that events could be held indoors or out," he said. "There will be tables and chairs and possibly a small Scandinavian fireplace." The new lounge, which will be called "The Village Square," should be completed early this summer, he added.

goals by a number of means, the first being to cut down the number of add-drops through effective advising. Smith emphasized the crucial role students play in their own success by going after and getting good advising.

Another way administration is attempting to cut down on the number of add-drops is through the design of the registration system itself. By using three batches, each with a separate deadline, and offering students the incentive of being more likely to get the classes they want and need by participating in advising and being with the first batch, school officials in each department can gauge student demand for courses after the cut-off date for each batch and make appropriate adjustments to accommodate that demand. Such administration responses may include adding or dropping sections and juggling classrooms based on class size.

Other information required in the packets includes the time blocks in which students are available for class attendance. The registration computer system is being programmed to give each student the best class "fit" based on student class requests and schedule restrictions according to Jim Bentley, associate director of administrative computing.

Another incentive for students to participate in the mail-in system in that participating students may add or drop classes before non-participating students even get a crack at registration.

Returning students are strongly advised to make sure the Registrar has their current addresses, because duplicate packets will be impossible to acquire except under the most extraordinary circumstances. The Registrar's office is also setting up a Registration Hotline as of the first week in April, to answer questions about the new system. The number is 887-7303. The Registrar's office will not field specific questions about the new system until after they've finished processing Spring registration at the end of March, but they are accepting address updates.

The Pros & Cons of Fish Oils

One of our students asked us about the fish oil extracts that are on the shelves in some of our local drugstores and health food stores. An article in the Sun by Dr. Timothy Johnson addressed just that topic. He stated that there is enormous interest in the possibility that fish oils may contain unique properties to help guard against heart disease and other major illnesses. We have known for years, from studies involving Eskimos, that those members of this population who eat high amounts of fish have a lower incidence of coronary artery disease when compared to individuals who consume animal fats (such as the typical American diet).

It is tempting to conclude that the fish oils make all the difference. In truth, though, it will take much more study to determine whether it is due to the fish oil consumption or some other (less obvious) factor related to the Eskimo lifestyle and diet.

Dr. Johnson certainly encourages, as I do, eating fish (at least once a week and even more) because it would mean less animal fat and calories in our diet. It may also mean increased amounts of these fish oils that can help protect against heart disease.

However, we should be reluctant to take fish oil extracts until we learn more about the specific pros and cons of such preparations. Until we do, it is preferable to get fish oils the way the Eskimos do - from whole fish.

MAYNARD FERGUSON MESMERIZES CSUSB

by Jackie Wilson

Last Tuesday evening, the music department sponsored "An Evening with Maynard Ferguson". The renowned virtuoso trumpeter and his band gave a terrific jazz concert in the Recital Hall to a lively crowd of over four hundred.

Chants of "Maynard, Maynard" went up minutes before the jazz trumpeter appeared on stage and when he appeared, he was welcomed by great cries and whistles.

Mr. Ferguson immediately got down to business by throwing off his jacket and conducting his band in their opening number of "The Stresso". Saxophone player Tim Weis did an excellent solo in this number and gave the audience a treat by playing two instruments at once. Next, Mr. Ferguson demonstrated what "true Jazz" was by performing "Central Park" which was an obvious crowd-pleaser by the loud applause he and the band received afterwards.

The tempo then slowed down and the band did a mellow jazz tune. In this number the crowd seemed to be mesmerized with Maynard's trumpet playing which was excellent. When the band performed "Bebop Buffet", Maynard brought out Denis DiBlasio who did an impressive five minute scat that had the audience amazed and delighted.

The second set opened with sounds from the Caribbean and people were dancing in their seats. Then the lights were dimmed and drummer Dave Miller went into an incredible drum solo with his red-tipped drumsticks that illuminated the darkness and whizzed through the air, leaving the crowd in an uproar.

Midway through the concert, Maynard and his band acknowledged the small crowd of people in the Chorale Room who were viewing the concert via videoscreen. Although most of the people had no complaints of these seating arrangements, some agreed that if the concert were held in the University gymnasium as was originally planned, the overflow of people would have been more easily accommodated.

Ferguson's band was a total enjoyment. The band was comprised of Steve Fisher, percussionist, Dave Miller, drummer, Wayne Burgeronne, lead trumpeter, Alex Isles, trombone, Allan Weiss, trumpet, Tim Reis and Rick Margitzak, saxophonists, Todd Carlin, keyboards, Dave Carpenter, bass, and Michael Higgins, guitarist. As a whole, they put the audience in moods ranging from handclapping and dancing in their seats to silent and taken aback with their wide variety of instruments.

Master Sergeant Announces Army ROTC Retirement

by Melissa E. McDowell

The Cal State Army ROTC program announces the retirement of its operations NCO, Master Sergeant Jimmie Cooley.

Cooley, a former Special Forces member, has served with the Army for 24 years, and is a Vietnam veteran.

With the sergeant's experience, helicopter rappel training was added to the Cal State training program. The rappelling demonstration from the Pfau Library has become a major event during the University's Open House each year.

While Cooley was stationed on campus, enrollment in the ROTC program increased over 40 percent through his efforts. Prior to his being assigned to the Cal State program, M. Sgt. Cooley served in the infantry as a light weapons instructor at the Army Institute of Military Assistance and was reconnaissance team leader in combat in Vietnam.

Cooley's achievements throughout his military career include two Army Commendation Medals, Airborne training and designation as outstanding drill sergeant with the Special Forces, Fort Bragg N.C.

He leaves Cal State to return to his family and home in North Carolina.

Cooley's position will now be taken over by Sergeant John Richardson. Richardson comes to Cal State from Ft. Lewis, Wash., Second Ranger Battalion. Like Cooley, Richardson has prior airborne training. He has also served as a member of the Military Police.

Richardson joined the Army in 1971. His subsequent tours of duty have included such places as Hawaii and Germany, where he met his wife.

From the short time he has been involved with the program, Richardson finds working here on campus a refreshing change.

"I have more time to spend with my family," he laughed. "It's nice not to have my daughters ask 'are you going to be home tonight?'" Richardson also plans, in the three years he will be stationed here, to take some night classes in business administration.

Sgt. Richardson echoes M. Sgt. Cooley in his sentiments about the University ROTC. They both agree: "It's a very fine program."

CSUSB Women Are Ranked Fifth In The Western Region

by Steve Karen

Cal State's Women's Basketball team with the help of their new coach Jo Anne Bly, has made a dramatic turnaround from last year's losing record of 4-20 to a chance to make the national playoffs. With their 12-5 record the Coyotes are currently ranked fifth in the Western Region. They will need to improve their standings to at least fourth place to give them a reasonable shot to qualify for the NCAA Division III Regionals. Bly's goal for the year is to win twenty games this season, and with only nine games left to play, it is going to be tough. Key games could come against UC San Diego and Notre Dame.

There are still three home games left for you to come and cheer the Lady Coyotes on to victory, and I'm sure they would appreciate all the support they can get. And to help you remember when the Coyotes are playing, here is a list of their last three home games.

Saturday, February 8, Claremont-McKenna (7pm), Wednesday, February 12, Biola (7pm), Saturday, February 15, UC San Diego (6pm)

Speaker program to expand

by Blane Harrington

The CSUSB Special Event's Committee, encouraged by student response, will continue to sponsor celebrity guest speakers, according to Special Events Coordinator Sandy Weiser.

"The committee's main goal is to bring bigger name personalities to campus in hopes of attracting more students and community

Ms. Weiser hopes that CSUSB's special events will help create a greater bond between the university and the city of San Bernardino.

"We're trying to have something for everyone, and we're really striving for variety," Ms. Weiser said.

Ms. Weiser said the committee chooses speakers and events mainly on the basis of their appeal members," Ms. Weiser said.

Last quarter, the Special Events Committee's guest speakers included George Plimpton, Wally George, and UFO expert Robert Hastings.

and potential popularity.

"But we don't have a mold," Ms. Weiser said. "We want to make this a live campus, intellectually and in terms of entertainment."

The Special Events Committee planned and paid for the three events during the fall. Throughout the rest of the year, it will help campus groups organize and pay for additional events. Ms. Weiser said the committee has helped the Black Student Union fund a visit by Shirley Chissom, the first woman nominated for president.

The majority of students polled at Wally George's and Robert Hastings' lectures asked for either a rock group or a comedian to appear on campus, and the committee is looking into both possibilities, Ms. Weiser said. Other requests include nationally recognized Shakespearean troupes, and other theatre groups.

"Eventually we hope to put out a calendar of events each year," Ms. Weiser said. These events will be supported by subscribers such as alumni, and solicited by mailing lists.

ACLP offers chance for cultural interaction

by Dan Williams

Students seeking interesting and educational experiences with students from other cultures need look no further than Cal State's ACLP program, according to Linda Chaffee, program director.

The American Culture and Language Program is designed to help International students learn English and feel at home in the United States.

ACLP students come from various countries which include Ethiopia, Indonesia, Japan, Jordan, Korea, Peru, Saudi Arabia, Taiwan, and Venezuela.

The ACLP program encourages interactions between American and foreign students, which allows all students to gain knowledge about different cultures.

"This is the place to come to learn about other cultures," Ma-

Chaffee said. "We can help Americans with intercultural problems while we help our international students as well."

American students are invited to participate in any of ACLP's upcoming field trips. These events include a trip to the Palm Springs Aerial Tramway Jan. 24, whale watching at San Pedro Feb. 7, attending the Civic Light Opera's presentation of "Evita" Feb. 18, and watching a Lakers vs. Clippers basketball game at the L.A. Sports Arena March 19.

American students can inquire about purchasing Lakers vs. Clippers tickets after Feb. 10, according to Jean Delgado, ACLP instructor.

Students who are interested in the ACLP program may contact Linda Chaffee at PL-503, located on the fifth floor of the library, or dial 887-7666.

Energetic new VP is people oriented

by Jerry Nye

"He's going to serve this institution well," said CSUSB President Anthony H. Evans. "I'm convinced of that."

His name is Robert C. Detweiler and he is the new vice president for Academic Affairs at CSUSB.

"I've been here for three months now," Detweiler joked recently, "and I just figured out where the restrooms are."

Detweiler, 46, is married and lives with his wife Susan, and their two children in San Bernardino. He is fond of the San Bernardino area, and thinks it is underrated.

Detweiler received his bachelor's degree from Humboldt State University in 1960, and a master's degree in 1965 from San Francisco State University. Detweiler earned a doctorate in history from the University of Washington in 1968, after serving some time in the armed forces. He is presently a colonel in the military reserves.

Much of Detweiler's work experience was gained at San Diego State University from 1968 to 1985. He served the first 10 years there as a professor in the history department, later becoming chairman both of the faculty senate and of the history department itself. Subsequently, he was promoted to associate dean of the School of Arts and Letters. In 1980 he became dean of the school. Detweiler served in that position for five years before applying to CSUSB for his present position as the vice president, second in command to President Evans.

"I'm emphatically delighted to be here," Detweiler explains. "There's a sense of dynamism here at CSUSB, of life and growth. But it's still small enough to be friendly and personable. I think the campus is beautiful. There are a lot of non-traditional students here and I find that attractive."

"He has been received well, and rightly so," said President Evans.

"He's a person with an extraordinary high level of energy. He has the vision one expects from a chief academic officer, and these attributes have gained him quick acceptance on the campus."

"I'm the guy who's responsible for all the academic programs," Detweiler explained. "We hire all the faculty, and make all the personnel decisions. The primary reason for us to be here is to help the faculty do their jobs. Our responsibility is to encourage the professional development of our faculty."

Detweiler says his success as an administrator comes from being industrious, and willing to work with people.

Detweiler said that his career goal is to become the president of a university, but only when he's ready. For now he's busy just being the vice president, where an average day for him is a minimum of 12 hours.

"I'm very people-oriented," he said. "We have an excellent president, very forward thinking, and three excellent vice presidents. I'm proud of the faculty. There's a good sense of teamwork, of pulling together. Problems in departments are viewed as university problems where everyone pulls together to solve them."

He loves to play racquetball, and rates himself as a class "B" player. President Evans says he can beat just about any member of the faculty or administration.

Detweiler enjoys an interest in the origins of slavery and racism, as well as the origins of the Revolutionary War. He likes antiques, and has some "nice old furniture from the 1820's" in the house he and his wife are fixing up.

An International Government Modeled After Our Own Federal Government ?

Dear Editor:

Michael Heister (letter to the editor, Jan. 15) makes a good point, we're getting sick and tired of terrorist activities aimed at us, or anyone else for that matter. Mr. Heister then goes on to say that it's time to do something about it and suggests an international government.

What type of international government is he talking about, besides being modeled after our federal government? Would it hold any legislative powers like our federal government? Could they pass legislation affecting trade policies, cross-border travel, immigration, etc.? How about powers of taxation (with representation, of course) and social programs to help lesser developed countries?

Mr. Heister mentions an international military. Does that mean a power to draft? We're not too nuts about a draft in our own country, would we sit still for an international draft?

Or would an international government strictly be a big brother, with no legislative powers per se, watching everyone to make sure they stay in their playgrounds, intervening militarily and judicially only when asked to do so?

Next, how feasible is it to think that every known country and government would be willing to be told what to do or watched over by someone outside of their borders? The USSR and Libya both come to mind as countries who wouldn't jump into this wholeheartedly, ready to give in to and obey a higher source.

How willing would we be to join an international government that wasn't formed to our specifications and didn't play by our rules? Would we pack up our marbles and go home?

In order to have an effective international government everyone would have to be in it. If some countries refused we couldn't force them to join, and they wouldn't be bound to obey the rules. And once a country is in could they drop out later, or would there be a U.S. style Civil War to force them to stay in?

To get everyone to agree to an international government, its powers would get watered down to everybody's approval. Viola!! It's the United Nations. The UN may not be perfect, but let's stick with what we have and try to improve it. An international constitutional convention and government would be a little extreme. I'm sure we could find other workable means to battle terrorism.

WILL THE REAL UN PLEASE STAND

Dear Editor:

I was highly amused by the opinion expressed by Michael Heister (January 15, 1986). Of particular interest were his statements concerning a "world government."

For Mr. Heister's information, there already exists such an organization. This organization, founded forty years ago, has an Executive Branch (the Secretary-General), a Legislative Branch (the General Assembly), and a Judicial Branch (the World Court), and is collectively known as The United Nations. However, it has not lived up to the expectations of the United States or the world.

First off, there is the General

Assemble. The UN has condemned military action by Israel, an ally of the United States. This country's continued support of Israel is a violation of the UN charter, yet we see nothing wrong with our actions.

Another failure of the UN is its inability to act. The best that the General Assembly can ever hope to be is a debate forum, all talk and no action. The action arm of the UN, the Security Council, can't act without a unanimous vote, and any one member can veto a proposal.

Thirdly there is a World Court. This arm of the UN can't take any action either. When the UN was established, it was found to be impossible to impose specific laws to govern member nations, and so they were left vague and unenforceable. And, when the "model" United States was brought before the World Court and didn't like the verdict, we simply walked out, and there was nothing that could be done.

There are many other examples (such as the United States' withdrawal from UNESCO), but I don't want to belabor the point. Mr. Heister foresees a world government founded on the democratic principle to be the ideal answer, yet in reality it can cause nothing but problems.
